Commissioner Martin:

I read with interest the Notice of Inquiry posted on the FCC web site. I am pleased to know that some action is finally being taken on this important issue.

I can not offer any scientifically backed evidence of the impact of violence on children or adults, but one must question the correlation between the increase in broadcast violence with the increase in violence within our society. We can see its effect on our own children and grandchildren. While less attention is given to the effect on adults, the rise of road rage may be connected to the rise in broadcast violence depicting the very acts we regularly see in the news.

It's high time that efforts to curb broadcast violence be taken by someone other than concerned parents. We need people in authority who have the ability to actually influence policy. Please be diligent.

Sincerely,

Janet Roth

Commissioner Abernathy:

This email is to simply let you know my opinion regarding violence on TV. I hope this along with other comments from the public on this topic, may be helpful to you in formulating standards that are right for viewers.

Specifically, there is no need for the type or amount of violence that is seen in children's and teen's programs. These images stay in their heads, they dream about them and affect their sleep and they act them out (kicking or hitting like they do in the show they watched). For this reason, we have screened and limited TV watching.

However, there are many parents that either do not take this upon themselves, they are too busy, don't know how it is impacting their kids, or don't care. This is having an impact on our society and our kid's behaviors. If that is not reason enough, I don't know what is. Or, to put it another way, what is the reason for the extreme violence and profanity in children and teen programs?

Sincerely,

Laura Tushaus

I am very concerned at the violent programing on television. I believe children become desensitized from viewing the violence and began acting out what they observe on T.V. There are too many examples to give in one e-mail. Regardless if it's a child who is injured or killed while acting out wrestling moves they watched on T.V. or immitating graphic violence of stabbings they watched on Television it needs to stop. There are reasons our Parents and Grandparents put limits on these things and that's what we need to remember. Please help concerned parents stop all the violence our children our forcefed through the media.

Dear Sir,

Just wanted to let you know that a way for you to contribute to a healthy child's life is by taking a stand on the violence in TV. Basic cable packages should not include R rated movies or violent shows like CSI. I do turn the channel when something is not appropriate for my children to view, but it would be so much better if i didn't have to worry about what they were going to see while they are changing channels! Does violence affect kids? Children role play all the time! Of course it does! If things don't change soon, we just may have to get rid of the TV! Thanks for this opportunity to tell you what I think!
